

King Krishndev Raye was gifted 3 precious flower pots by his ally. These flowerpots were so beautiful that they became dearest to the King. The King appointed a special servant to clean and look-after the flowerpots. Once a mouse passed over one of the pots. The pot trembled and fell upon the ground. Needless to say that Krishndev Raye was enraged knowing this. The King ordered death penalty to the servant. When Tenali Ram heard about it, he became upset for the servant. Tenali visited the servant in prison and disclosed a plan to save his life.

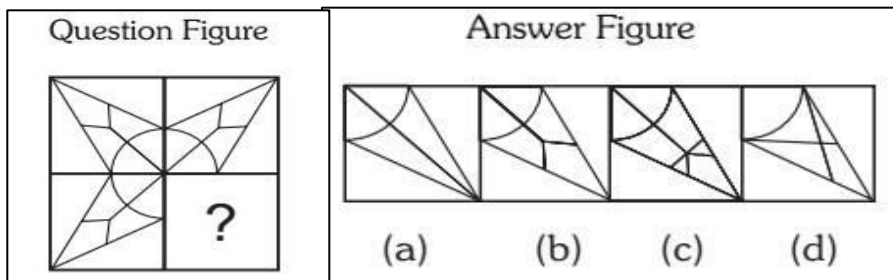

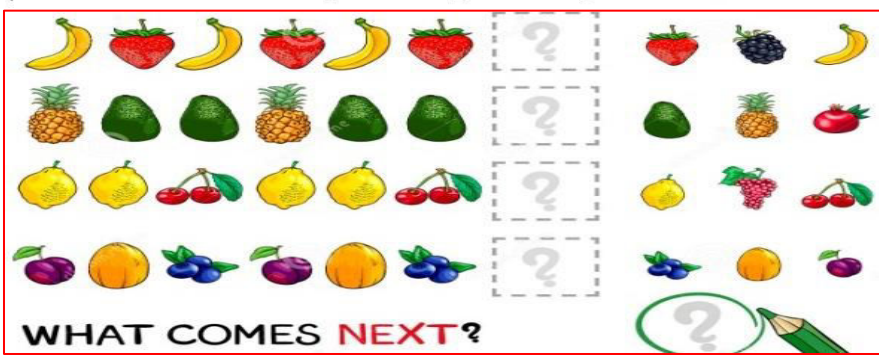

Next day when the servant was taken for execution, the hangman asked his last wish. The servant desired to see the remaining two flowerpots. The flowerpots were presented before the servant. The servant quickly picked the pots and crushed them upon the ground. The King's anger knew no bounds. When he asked the reason for this, the servant politely replied "Maharaja, these flowerpots are perishable and bound to perish one day, but at least before dying I have saved at least two invaluable lives which would have perished with these pots." The King realized his folly and ordered immediate release of the servant.
