

THE BIGGEST FOOL

There once lived a king. Though he had many people working for him in his kingdom, his minister of the royal court was the wisest. Whenever the king wanted advice on any matter he would be sure to speak to his wise minister first. One day someone presented the king with a bushel of eggplants as gift. They were ripe and ready to be cooked for the king's next meal. However, the king decided to test his minister's loyalty. He started yelling and told the minister, "Oh, these eggplants are too black! They look really ugly and probably taste really bad. Throw them away!"

Hearing this, the minister at once agreed, "Yes, you are perfectly correct". The next day the king summoned the royal cook. He told him, "There are no better vegetables than eggplants! They are delicious and I want them for my meal today." Hearing this, the minister at once agreed, "Oh yes my king. The eggplant is the best."

The King asked the minister, "Why did you change your mind? Yesterday when I said how much I hated them, you agreed, and then today when I praised them you praised them as well."

"The reason is very simple my king", replied the minister. "I am not a servant of eggplants., I am your servant. If you say you don't like something, I don't like it either. If you like something, then so do I." The king was very pleased and gave the minister a big reward for his loyalty.

MORAL : Like the minister, we too must realise to whom we are to be loyal. Are we the servants of our belongings, fashions, and friends, or the loyal servants of our God and Guru? Whose wishes should we follow ?
